Hon. W. A. Fallow Visits Raymond

HE AND N. H. BRADLEY GO OVER STIRLING—RAYMOND & RAYMOND—CRADDOCK ROADS — NO WORK LIKELY THIS YEAR

Hon. W. A. Fallow, Minister of Public Works in the Provincial Government, and N. H. Bradley, district engineer, were Raymond visitors Thursday morning and met with representatives of the Sugar City Municipal Council, and the Boards of Trade of Raymond and Stirling over the much discussed link between Raymond and The Sunshine Trail. The entire party of three carloads made a drive over the circle so that the Minister could see the two routes.

In a few minutes discussion in the Town Hall a new angle was injected into the entire problem when the Minister informed the group that a suggestion of re-routing the Sunshine Trail preparatory to hard-surfacing, and that a new road from Craddock through Raymond and then north to Lethbridge may be built and hard-surfaced, thus making the one trunk road from Lethbridge to Welling serve the entire south of the province. Mileages and the geography of the country was being studied with respect to this suggestion and while no definite announcement was made, the Minister made it quite plain that in surfacing the road the route would be chosen that would give the greatest per dollar value of cost.

This left the problem of a secondary highway rather in the air, and there was not much to discuss. Both Mr. Fallow and Mr. Bradley appreciated the need of a good all-weather road from Stirling to Raymond, and as much as the Government had no allotments made for any of this work in this year's program, the officials suggested that the Municipality go on and do what improving they could on these two roads as there appeared to be a great deal of traffic over these routes for such poor roads.

The meeting thanked Mr. Fallow and Mr. Bradley for their time and the discussion was cut short because the Minister had to leave Calgary at 1 p.m. for Edmonton.

G. Gordon Whyte, of Regina, after spending a week in Cardston, spent the week end in Raymond, a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. S. Anderson. He was a visitor at the Church services on Sunday.

A very successful and enjoyable Relief Society Conference was held in the Second Ward Church on Tuesday, when the Stake Relief Society officers and board, with officers and members from every ward and branch in the Stake gathered to discuss problems of Relief Society work and to plan their program for the coming fall and winter.

Nothing of particular moment arose, but all the ladies enjoyed the discussion of work and projects throughout the Stake, and the reports made showed the work to be in a very satisfactory condition throughout the Stake. No count of the large number present was taken, but 2nd Ward members accounted for 71 of the total.

The Resolutions Committee recently appointed by the Board of Trade unanimously adopted the following resolution, copies of which have been mailed to the Federal Government and the Superintendents of all the chartered Banks in Alberta, Raymond, Alberta, June 14th, 1938.

Hon. Wm. Aberhart, Premier, Province of Alberta, Edmonton, Alberta.

Dear Sir:—

At a meeting of the Board of Trade at Raymond on Wednesday, June 6th, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

RESOLVED, that this body ask the Provincial Government to refrain from passing any legislation which would increase taxation or make conditions such that it would necessitate the closing of small branch banks in this Province.

Further, that the 7 p.c. Production Tax is discriminatory in its nature and should not be put into effect.

We appeal to your Government to consider the above resolution in its many ramifications. This Board of Trade appreciates fully the services rendered by the banks in this Province and feel that discriminatory action on the part of the Government which would make it impossible for them to operate, will have a very retarding influence on the prosperity of the communities in which they are located. Any tendency to reduce the circulation of money in the various districts cuts down the earning power of individuals and all commercial activities.

In connection with the 7 p.c. Production Tax. It is generally felt that this tax is unjust, and while perhaps was intended to equalize tax burdens, in actual effect will throw a further burden on the producer who is already heavily taxed, and in effect will penalize and discourage the efficient producer who is lending every effort to increase production by more energetic and capable methods.

We are sure that you are aware that it is only production originating in the Province that will increase the wealth of its people.

We sincerely ask you to give very serious consideration to the above important factors which will have an outstanding effect on the welfare of the communities of this Province.

Yours very truly,
Raymond Board of Trade,
S. B. Card Vice President,
L. L. Palmer, Secretary.

WILL IT BE A BOOMERANG?

Will the 2 per cent Securities Tax Act act as a boomerang to the people of Alberta? This is a question that will bear scrutiny by every citizen of our Province. We hope that we will not be misunderstood in our comments on this matter, and that none will misjudge our earnestness in it.

For some months past, because of the difference of opinion between the Provincial Government and the Banks and Mortgage companies there have been but very few loans under the Home Improvement Plan made in Southern Alberta, because the people who had the money to loan were not willing to let it out in Alberta under such unsettled conditions. Now people are wondering what the effect will be under this new huge housing scheme loan that the Dominion Government is working on.

According to the best information we can obtain so far, it will be operated as was the Home Improvement Plan, i.e., the Dominion Government will guarantee a percentage of the loan but the actual finance for the scheme will come through Mortgage and Bond Companies chartered banks, Life Insurance companies and other similar institutions. If this is the case, and the business is handled through the Chartered Banks of the Province, then in cases where the furnishing companies have lost faith or are in doubt about the ultimate outcome of their security and collections, there will be very little if any loaning done and activity will be correspondingly decreased.

Measure the benefit to hundreds of home owners in Alberta if they were able to borrow one hundred to one thousand dollars to modernize their homes, or to add that extra room or sun porch they have wanted so long. Imagine what it would mean to business and labor in Alberta if eight or ten million dollars of this amount were to come to Alberta to permit of many of these cherished dreams being carried out. How disappointing it is going to be to many thousands of Albertans if during the gets under way across our broad coming summer the program Dominion, and we in Alberta are left out because of a lack of confidence of investors in conditions in Alberta.

After all, the fact that legislation is considered that makes collection of loans impossible, and throws an added burden of taxation on the people who have past, is reason enough for investment of the money in years of companies and syndicates to look ahead at such a province, and on top of this, the fact that there are thousands of Albertans with A1 credit ratings, who find their hands tied as far as improvements are concerned by provincial legislation which makes their credit null and less.

There is, without question, a happy medium in this as in every other matter, beyond which man nor government should advance. Revenue is essential, but the taxation burden should not be too-sided, and in seeking to implement revenue from any source, some care should be taken not to kill the goose that lays the golden egg.

Our Edmonton Letter

(T. B. Windross)

Edmonton, June 13.—It was of more political importance that the members of the Alberta government were back in Edmonton as this week opened, nominally at least performing the work for which they draw their cabinet salaries instead of campaigning for more power in another province.

The overwhelming defeat which swept over them in Saskatchewan last Wednesday left marks which were plainly visible to political observers here. That Saskatchewan trouncing meant that the Social Credit party machine lost heavily in prestige in Alberta. On top of the dreadful disillusionment which has come to Premier Aberhart and his camp followers in the past year, through the complete failure of the "true blue" pledges, the fast-shrinking membership in the Social Credit league and the attempt to use the former Recall act, now comes the Saskatchewan avalanche.

The Social Credit party won just two seats out of the 50 for which voting took place last week, and there was danger that either of both of those two seats might prove, in the end, to have been won by other parties in the recount proceedings. The Social Credit majority in one was just 43 votes out of 10,000; in the other, it was 46 votes. That is less than 100 votes, unless recounts bring a different story, saved the Social Credit machine from complete annihilation in Saskatchewan, as happened in British Columbia last year. So much for Aberhart's prediction that his party would sweep Saskatchewan, and the even more glowing forecast of his apostles that Social Credit would sweep the country.

It was hardly to be expected, of course, that Mr. Aberhart and the others would be at a loss for words. Aberhart himself could not be found for a full day after the election, although it was known that plans had been laid for a triumphal march, and bonfires on every hill, if Saskatchewan elected a Social Credit government. But when the Alberta premier came back to Edmonton, he had nothing to say until many hours later, and then issued a statement talking about the "highly oiled machine" of the opposition parties. They were not so "highly oiled" that the party leaders undertook to select the candidates over the heads of the constituents, it was commented here. And Mr. Aberhart said that had Saskatchewan had the Alberta system of a transferable vote, "at least 10" Social Credit candidates would have been elected. That struck seasoned observers here as being humorous, for the premier could not possibly know how anyone would vote on second choices, but it would seem sure that those who voted against Social Credit on the first vote would certainly vote for the other opposing party on the second, so that at least one of the seats which Social Credit is counted as winning would have been lost. The two ridings chalked up to Social Credit had the smallest winning pluralities in the entire election—and hence the probability of recounts.

Premier Aberhart also noted that the Liberal government got 45.8 per cent of the total popular vote, but 72 per cent of the seats. But he did not seem to remember that in 1935 in Alberta his party got only 54 per cent of the total vote, but 88.8 per cent of the seats. In Saskatchewan his party machine got only 15 per cent of the total vote ranking behind the Liberals and the C. C. F. and just ahead of the Conservatives.

One of the features of the Social Credit campaign was the use of "storm-troopers"—a gang of men organized as "special police" when Aberhart spoke at Melville, Saskatchewan, the night before election. These men, who wore arm-bands in the same fashion as the Fascist armlet but inscribed with the words "special police," and who had their own "chief of police," dragged from the meeting five men who wanted to ask the premier questions, and allegedly beat them and choked at least one. It was claimed at the time that the gang had permission from the R.C.M.P. to "control" the meeting, but it later developed that there was no such authorization. The Saskatchewan attorney-general announced at the week-end that action would be taken against those responsible. Aberhart watched silently from the platform while his "special police" dragged out six men, including five unemployed men who had gone from Calgary to demand that the three members of the Alberta legislature's "special relief committee" be sent back to Alberta to do their jobs.

In Edmonton the whole episode was taken as a shaming example of the methods which Aberhart could be expected to adopt if he was given unquestioned dictatorial rights in this province, and his own police force.

The Alberta government did some hard swallowing last week, and dropped the appeals to the privy council against the right of federal disallowance of provincial legislation and of the lieutenant-governor to reserve assent to provincial legislation. In dropping those appeals the Aberhart government in effect threw overboard all its bombastic claims of the past to "sovereign state" privileges in Alberta.

At the same time in what was regarded here as an attempt at face-saving, the premier said he wanted all the other provinces to join with him in organizing a campaign against such powers by the federal government and the lieutenant-governor. But only the day before Premier Duff Pattullo of British Columbia had declared, regarding the whole situation, that Aberhart had done more than anyone to destroy the sovereign rights of provinces.

Despite the fact that federal legislation to nationalize the Bank of Canada has already been announced, the Alberta government last week, through Provincial Treasurer Solon Low, has begun an attack on the central bank, switching over from its attack on the chartered banks in view of the real danger of many branch banks withdrawing from Alberta. It was a diplomatic change of front, but observers here believe that its worth as propaganda for the benefit of Alberta voters will be lost. And in the meantime, Mr. Aberhart was awaiting from Prime Minister Mackenzie King some reply to his letter asking that the banks be not allowed to close their branches. The Ottawa Citizen, which has had Social Credit leanings for years past because its editor is a disciple of Major C. H. Douglas, did not offer Aberhart much sympathy. Regarding the federal government's move to nationalize the Bank of Canada, the "Citizen" said:

"The dominion government's new step should strengthen control of the national credit in accordance with the will of parliament, but there is no reason to regard it as tending to substitute the state for private enterprise in the business of commercial banking. Nor should it ever be necessary to compete with the private banks. They are as well managed in private hands as the government could desire."

It was expected here, therefore, that Low's charge, delivered over the air under the name of the Social Credit board, that the Bank of Canada is governed by "international money barons" would fall on doubting ears in Alberta.

Monty Wallace has just arrived in California, having broken the East-West cross country airplane record. Natalie Wade, mis taken by him for a newspaper reporter, writes the exclusive account of Monty's arrival, and succeeds in securing a trial job with a paper in exchange for the story. Natalie becomes attached to Monty.

Although she discovers Monty's love for her is not sincere, Natalie admits that she loves him. She is assigned by her paper to report Monty's activities for publication. Jimmy Hale, the newspaper's photographer, becomes Natalie's co-worker.

Natalie interviews Jabe Marion, a wealthy airplane builder, who decides to build a record-breaking 'round the world plane for Monty. Marion's daughter, Sunny, exquisitely beautiful, is attracted to Monty. She invites Natalie to dine with her, when they meet the aviator unexpectedly.

Natalie discovers that Sunny is jealous of her friendship with Monty, and that she is trying to prevent them from being alone. After driving to a mountain resort with Sunny and Jimmy, Monty again declares his love for Natalie.

Sunny attempts to drive Natalie from Monty's attention by climbing a high wall. She almost loses her balance and is pulled back by Monty. Jimmy later asks Natalie to consider his love for her if she refuses Monty.

Natalie induces Monty to set out with her in an airplane search for two missing aviators. At dusk Monty lands the plane in the open country, where he and Natalie must spend the night.

Resuming the search in the morning, they finally locate the fliers. Natalie wires the story to her paper. That night at dinner, Marion announces a non-stop 'round the world flight, with Monty piloting the new plane, 'Sunny Marion.'

Monty's plan is to have ten re-fuelling stations along the route, where pilots are to go aloft to refuel his plane. Monty flies with Natalie to New York, where he will begin the flight eastward. They are followed by Jimmy and Sunny.

The day before the flight, Monty once more declares his love to Natalie.

The woman rose to go. Fraidly content with one day's mischief, her mind sought relief in other surroundings. Need less to say, Sunny was glad she was leaving.

A moment later, the click of the front door told Sunny she was at last alone. She fell to the couch sobbing.

She was still sobbing a half hour later when Monty, layzed at the outer door. Sunny rose hurriedly, dabbed at her eyes and ran her fingers over her hair. But she was more joyful than surprised to meet Monty so unexpectedly.

"Hello, kid!" was Monty's breezy greeting. Inside he looked intently at Sunny, then added:

"See here—are those tears?" Sunny smiled weakly. She nodded negatively, but Monty tilted her face toward the light.

"What's the matter?" he asked tenderly. "I can't believe you're feeling that badly over me; it must be just a case of the nerves after all this excitement."

Sunny half turned to take Monty's arm. They walked together toward a large arm chair Monty talked on.

"Sure—that's the trouble, too much excitement. It almost got me too for a while. But don't worry. Nothing's going to happen—I hope."

Sunny had recovered herself. "I thought you were in jail," she began, "did Nat fix things?"

"That's just it," Monty confessed. "I don't really know who did. Fact is, those phone cops didn't even take me to the station. They drove me across town, stopped and invited me to go my way. Naturally I could not refuse."

The explanation puzzled Sunny. Surely, in this chain of strange happenings, Monty's adventure was strangest of all. Then in a flash Sunny saw it all.

"Why, Mont!" she exclaimed. "Don't you remember? The phone call from Mack Hanlon? I wonder if he didn't send those plug-uglys around to get you away from here?"

"Why not?" agreed Monty. "I'm perfectly willing to hand the bouquets to Mack until a more deserving candidate pops up!"

Sunny's thoughts had already passed on to other things. Here alone with Monty, she could certainly find a way to extricate herself from a precarious position. At first she considered telling Monty the whole story, confessing her part in the tangled web. But something within her forbade such candor. In a moment she had decided and launched her campaign.

"Mont," she began evenly. "What are you going to do about this woman?"

Monty thought for a moment, then replied quickly, "Nothing."

"If I fight back, she'll have something on which to hang 'if I play possum, she'll soon get her claims," Monty reasoned, tired of flailing the wind and either quit or make a fool of herself."

Sunny's mind was speeding to find an effective argument against this strategy which could only spell disaster for her.

"How do you now?" she asked. "That she hasn't something up her sleeve—something more tangible that might be used to make trouble?"

"I never saw the woman before in my life," Monty repeated, "and even if she does have something that can be twisted around as fake evidence, I think I can take care of myself in the clinches."

Sunny pondered a moment. It was quite obvious that any campaign to talk Monty into capitulation was bound to lose. She tried a last resort.

"Why not settle with her, just to avoid annoyance?" Sunny's evident eagerness betrayed her. "Why are you so anxious to see me give this girl hush-money?" Monty demanded, his eyes narrowing as he looked at her. Sunny winced. The shot had hit too close.

"Well," she began slowly, "I simply thought that if you could keep out of trouble—without paying too much, of course—you'd not be risking a nasty scandal, not only for your own account, but for Dad as well."

The mention of Sunny's Father, backer of the World flight, shed a new light on the situation for Monty. He began to remember that he was not solely responsible for what might happen to his name. Convinced that he could "take care of himself," yet he had no right to risk his sponsor, to risk spoiling the name and reputation that the Sunny Marion had traced around the World.

"Maybe you're right," Monty half-admitted. "Perhaps I'd better talk things over with The Boss. If he agrees with my policy we'll lay low and see what happens. But if he's inclined to feel the way—"

Sunny had suddenly turned pale. Here was an unexpected twist to her plan. If Monty went to her Father it would surely mean an eventual meeting between the elder Marion and the woman. That the woman would not hesitate to use her knowledge of Sunny's affair as a club to force Marion into line was a foregone conclusion. Sunny saw no alternative now than to tell Monty the truth.

"MEN AT WORK!"

The most cheerful sign on the road

"MEN AT WORK" is an encouraging, cheerful sign upon the highway.

It is the happiest sign on the business highway too.

Business enterprise, making wise use of banking service, is the mainspring of employment.

The contractor responsible for that "Men at Work" sign gets the job of building that stretch of highway by being the lowest responsible tenderer.

Not always does he have the ready money to buy all the materials, pay wages and build it out of his own resources. He goes to the bank and, having assets and a good reputation, he negotiates such advances as he may need.

He orders materials, sets men to work. As the job proceeds, engineers' certificates enable him to collect from those with whom he contracted, and the work goes on.

The highway finished, the bank is repaid. Such repayments enable the bank to supply credit to other responsible borrowers.

A manufacturer gets a large order, with an early time limit for delivery. With only a hundred men, his factory cannot turn out the articles within the time required. With more men he can do it—but he lacks sufficient cash.

Operating his factory, as a going concern, with a profitable order and having a reputation for integrity, he asks the bank to lend him what he needs to pay wages.

The bank makes him a loan. He takes on more men. They get wages. The goods are turned out, delivered and paid for. The manufacturer repays the bank with the agreed interest.

He has his profit and can spend some money developing new business to keep his men employed.

How does a bank make these advances—where does the money come from?

Banks, having branches throughout Canada, mobilize the surplus funds of millions of depositors, large and small, and based upon them, make credit available throughout the country as may be required.

Millions of little sums represent the toil, production and lifetime savings of Canadians—your fellow-citizens.

Safeguarding these deposits is the bank's first care.

Deposits of $1,000 or less—most of them much less—are owned by 3,770,000 out of Canada's 4,061,000 savings depositors. The total of all bank savings deposits in Canada is nearly $1,531,000,000; the average savings deposit in a bank is only $387.

Wisely safeguarded by Canada's chartered banks these deposits furnish credit that keeps "men at work" when used by Canadian business and industry—producing new realizable wealth from Canada's great resources. The country and all its people benefit.

In the field of business deposits, out of an average of 660,000 "current" accounts, 596,000 amount to $1,000 or less.

Savings deposits are, primarily, the basis on which banks can make loans.

Only the confidence of the people and their willingness to leave their money on deposit, enable a bank to lend money and—at small profit-margin to itself—serve the community.

We have mentioned the contractor and the manufacturer. The same process stimulates employment throughout the whole fabric of production, industry and commerce.

Loans to agriculture and for marketing agricultural products totalled in 1937, $38,294,000—9.0 per cent. of all ordinary bank loans shown on the return to the Minister of Finance, October 31st, 1937.

Of this sum $57,490,000 went to farmers, cattlemen and fruit raisers and $30,804,000 to grain dealers, seed merchants and grain exporters.

Other bank loans went to municipalities and school districts; wholesalers, retailers, manufacturers of and dealers in lumber, pulp and other forest products; fishermen; fish packers and curers; public utilities including transportation companies; stockbrokers and bond dealers; provincial governments; mining men; churches, parishes; hospitals; and to charitable and religious institutions.

Canada's chartered banks defend and protect the safety of the funds of depositors—the millions of thrifty souls we have described, whose life-savings they entrust to their banks.

No Canadian depositor, even through the world-shaking events of recent years, has had to fear for the safety of a single dollar lodged with Canada's chartered banks.

The funds of depositors are their own—not a reservoir from which everybody may draw at will for any and every new financial experiment.

THE CHARTERED BANKS OF CANADA

Your local branch bank manager will be glad to talk banking with you. He will be glad to answer your questions, from the standpoint of his own experience. The next article in this series will appear in this newspaper. Watch for it.

Glen Tollestrup was in the Beaver Mines district Thursday.

A Social Credit caucus is called for June 27-28 in Edmonton and it is possible that a special session may be called to deal primarily with the Federal Housing proposals.

Pres. A. H. Zabriskie and L. L. Paek were speakers at the Rotary meeting Monday night reporting the recent Rotary Convention in Banff. Both were high in their praise of the fine programs and the splendid features arranged by the Host Clubs of Calgary and Banff.

13 persons were killed and 40 were missing in Clyde, Texas, a village of 700 population after a slow moving tornado had passed through the town last Friday night. Considerable property damage also resulted.

Oil refineries are likely to be erected in both Edmonton and Calgary this summer. From the expansion programs of the oil business it seems that prosperity must be definitely here, or else these businesses are gradually moving westward instead of congregating so much in the eastern provinces.
